Four contractors will receive Contractor Excellence Awards

Lockheed Martin Space Operations Company is this year's winner in the large-business product category of the Marshall Center's Contractor Excellence Awards. Jacobs Sverdrup Technology Inc. received the award for the large-business service category. In the small-business categories, Marotta Scientific Controls Inc. received the award in the product category and Morgan Research Corporation took the award for the service category. Center Director Art Stephenson will present the awards during the coming months. These winners will become Marshall's nominees for NASA's George M. Low Award.
